One of my Aunt Ruby's friends had the most terrible thing happen to her. Her fingers turned black and fell off, and nobody knew why until her doctor asked if she had cable Internet access at home. It turns out that cable access emits deadly spiral waves that will turn your fingers gangrenous if you stay online long enough. According to an article a friend read in a magazine, the same thing has happened to at least three dozen other Internet users around the world, including two cats in Kalamazoo that sat on the computer monitor for
